THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1877.

We have been favoured with translations of certain Chinese tracts on the opium question, and produce two of them below.
No one will pretend to deny that opium is a great evil in China. It is undoubtedly the cause of great suffering, great distress, and, possibly, of a considerable amount of disease. If only on account of the immense sum of money that is annually spent on the drug without any substantial return, the practice of opium-smoking is to be deplored and condemned. The millions a year that are lost in the opium-pipe would, if saved, speedily enable China to effectively cope with the evils of famine, and raise itself from an impoverished, miserable, state to a condition of considerable prosperity. In many cases opium may be of benefit, and in many more has become almost a necessity of life; but on the whole opium is most assuredly a great curse to China as drink is to England. It is mainly when the members of the Anti-Opium Society rave about the duty of England in the matter that we differ with them. Because drink is England's curse, the Anti-Opium Society might just as reasonably appeal to France to desist from sending wine and brandy into our country, as to appeal to England to desist from sending opium into China.

The two cases present very parallel circumstances. Were France to refuse to import any more wine or brandy into England, the home production of intoxicating liquors would immediately increase, and anything we lacked would be obtained from other countries than France. So in China, if England prohibited the export of opium from India, the cultivation of the poppy in China would within a couple of years assume double its present proportions, while other countries would be found only too willing to pour an unlimited supply of the drug into the country. The chief difference in the two cases is that while the export of spirits from France to England could be stopped at very little cost to the former, the prohibition of the export of opium from India would probably entail as much distress upon that country as the consumption of the drug does upon China. The English Government restricts the export of opium by heavy duties and limitations, but it can hardly be expected to sacrifice eight millions sterling annually, and bring incalculable misery upon India for a mere sentiment that could not possibly lead to the cessation of opium smoking in China.

The first translation is that of a "Public Statement of the Women of the Villages who have suffered from opium." Both this and the other translation we give, are couched in the usual figurative style of Chinese writings, and in both the facts are consequently coloured or overdrawn.

We women make a public statement, afflicted and distressed, we haste to make mournful complaint.—Bowing down, we beg that Regulations may be established for prohibition in the villages.

When in youth we went to the homes of our husbands, we did not suffer from cold and hunger, but from the time our husbands and sons smoked opium, the children that were dressed—our daughters in green and our sons in red—in the twinkling of an eye, came to rags; ornamented halls and grand houses all vanished in smoke. They who before protected their families are reduced themselves to the appearance of beggars.
The beds have no coverlets, the household utensils have no food left in them. Hungry, there is nothing for them to eat; cold, there are no clothes for them to wear. The fault is surely with opium. In the distress it is difficult to give expression to the feelings that fill the breast. There is not a tear we shed that is not red with blood.

We have long been looking up to you, teachers, as the hope of the villages.
Bowing down, we entreat that you will take this matter in hand, and everywhere exhort the people of the villages not to make these purchases to their injury, so that the men and the women may be preserved alive. In this way those who received blessings from you, will be more than a thousand families, and ten thousand households; the women and the children will be happy indeed, and the people of the villages will be happy indeed!

The second translation is a "Statement of aged Artisans in regard to Opium Smoking."
We aged artisans are reduced to extremity in providing for our support. This extremity of poverty, bitterness, sadness, and poison is entirely owing to the injury of opium. We pitifully beseech you teachers to have compassion upon the poor people and establish a law for prohibition in the villages.

As for us, during the reign of Hien Fung we were able to live by our labor.
When it came to the reign of Tung Chi, it was difficult to make a living; why was it?
During the reign of Hien Fung there were brought from the English Dominions, of the smoking dirt eighty or ninety thousands, and there were exported from China more than fifty millions of money and from Canton eighteen millions.

Moreover, those who have formed the habit of smoking opium, when they smoke the foreign drug often, are led thereby to love lewdness, and gambling, which bring a waste in Canton yearly of not less than several millions. In all yearly, counting that exported and wasted, more than twenty millions! How is it possible that there should be money left for legitimate business?

When business and trade are so little,
how can we aged artisans have work.
The injury caused by opium may be called most bitter, most poverty-producing, most sad and most poisonous. Bowing down, we beg you teachers, on every side to entreat the people of the villages not to purchase opium to bring into the villages, and to request the village authorities to forbid the smoking of opium. Then money will return to the villages and trade will gradually revive;—we Artisans will gradually obtain clothes and food. When the village is enriched, the people will be enriched, and we Artisans will avoid being in rags and having the appearance of beggars.
Then all the towns and villages, men and women, old and young, will be happy indeed!

TOTAL LOSS OF THE M. M. S.

"MEIKONG."

News has been received in town of the total loss of the Messageries Maritimes steamer Meikong, which left Hongkong for Marseilles on the 26th ultimo, under the command of Captain Foahe. The unfortunate steamer was wrecked on Ras Hafoun, a headland on the African Coast some 80 miles south of Cape Guardafui, and about 500 miles from Aden; and as she was lost on the 17th, and the news comes to us thus early via London, it is presumed that some passing steamer must have seen the Meikong, and taken on the news to Aden. It is gratifying to know that all the passengers and crew are saved, although the mails have been lost—a fact which conclusively proves that the catastrophe must have been sharp, decisive, and soon over. The disaster will, therefore, entail the despatch of duplicate advices to Europe in all cases where that precaution has not already been taken.

The Meikong, though not one of the Messageries Company's newest vessels, was a fine steamer; and as she was not due at Aden until the 23rd, she was considerably ahead of her contract time when she struck.
The M. M. Co., however, have been unusually fortunate in regard to their steamers during the last fifteen or twenty years.
With the exception of the Hydaspes (between Singapore and Batavia) and the Nil (near Yokohama)—neither of which carried passengers at the time of her loss—this is the first really serious accident on this line which the Company has met with during that period. The coast around Cape Guardafui is notoriously dangerous, and although it seems strange that the Meikong was so far South, it must be borne in mind that the lights on the Coast there are neither numerous nor bright; Ras Hafoun has no light whatever.

The following are the names of the passengers from China and Japan who left in the Meikong on the 26th May.—For Marseilles, Messrs Pichon, W. A. Smith, Kinnear, du Mortier, August Hilly, Hoeburgh, Hoeseck, Byrna, and Vallon.—From Shanghai for Marseilles, Mr C. M. Matzen.

—From Yokohama: for Marseilles, Mr Piquet, and Mrs Beguene.
Her cargo—which comprised a large portion of new tea—was as follows:—For Continents, 53 bales Silk, 3 bales Waste Silk, 16 cases Silks, 20 chests and 265 boxes Tea, and 734 pkgs. Sundries.
For London, 143 bales Silk, 33 cases Silks, 971 bags Sugar, 18,390 boxes Tea, 9 cases Treasure (37,000), 2 cases Treasure (Tia 28,500), and 274 pkgs. Sundries.

SUPREME COURT.

IN CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

(Before His Lordship the Chief Justice Sir JOHN SMALE.)

21st June, 1877.

LARCENY AND EMBEZZLEMENT.

Regina v. Kwong Ahang.

The prisoner was indicted on two counts, for larceny of 84 taels and 6 mace of silver from one Lai Kung Chun, the master of the Tin Cheung gold and silver smith's shop, Queen's Road Central, on the 6th April last, and for embezzlement of 4 taels of gold leaf.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.
The Attorney-General, the Hon. G.
Phillippo, instructed by the Crown Solicitor,
Mr Sharp, prosecuted.
Mr Francis, instructed by Messrs Stephens and Holmes, appeared for the defence.

The following Jury was empanelled:— Messrs F. T. P. Foster, F. W. G. Von Stockhausen, A. D. R. Barros, P. Jordan, A. Bleeker, P. R. Doral and R. H. Ra-decker.

The facts were briefly these. On the 2nd April last, the prosecutor went home to his country and left the prisoner in charge of the shop. From what he heard from one Chun Ping Lit, a partner in the shop, he returned to the Colony on the 12th May last. He found the prisoner had left his service, and that he had not accounted for 84 taels and 6 mace of silver, and four taels of gold leaf.

The prosecutor was then called to prove the case. He said there were several participals in the shop, but the prisoner had no share. His evidence was precisely the same as that he adduced before the Magistrate.

In cross-examination, the prosecutor positively denied that the prisoner had any share in the shop, or had he paid any money into the shop when he came into the employment of the shop. It appeared that the prisoner had overdrawn his wages and money of the shop, and that a partner named Chun Ping Lit, who recommended him to the shop, had made good the sums for him. It appeared, also, that a woman was at the bottom of it. She was named Lee Ahwan and was inquisited to have had some sort of relation with Chun Ping Lit and she, it seemed, had paid up some of the prisoner's deficits. This occurred on the 7th April, the day after the date of the present charges.

In re-examination, the prosecutor admitted that the over-draws were in 1876.
The prisoner had no authority to over-draw wages, but there was an understanding that if he should over-draw his wages, the over-draws should be made good by Chun Ping Lit.

Police Intelligence.

(Before James Russell, Esq.)

June 21, 1877.

ALLEGED MUTUAL ASSAULT.

George Brown and James Smith, privates H.M. 25th Regiment, again appeared to answer the charge of assaulting Mr G.
Tanfer, the steam fire-engine keeper of the Hongkong Fire Insurance Company.
Mr Handley, instructed Mr Brewster, appeared for the prosecution.

The Magistrate said the case for the prosecution had closed, and it was only in the course of the defence that it having been elicited that some witnesses had seen the occurrence, he was induced to adjourn the case for them to be called.

Mr Handley said that since the adjournment a fresh witness had turned up; he was an Indian watchman, and the learned counsel presumed his Worship would have no objection to examine him.

His Worship said, not at all, he wished to arrive at the truth.
The evidence taken at the last hearing was then read over to Mr Handley.
Mr James Lembo was examined.—I am a merchant living at the Prys. I live next door to the Engine House. On the evening of the 15th, about 8.45 o'clock, I was in my room, reading a newspaper; I was rouned by my dogs barking. I went out to the verandah. I saw a soldier in the street in front of the engine house, with Mr Tanfer. I cannot identify the soldier, but he was in uniform. They were abusing each other. It must have been the soldier who used a bad term because I knew the voice of Tanfer. I cannot identify the defendants as the men. I heard Tanfer say, "What do you mean? what do you mean?" I thought a row might result and put on my jacket and went below. I found them fighting in the street. I retired behind to observe the fight. They seemed to have a fair fight with their fists. Tanfer went backwards to get into his house, but the soldier was continually closing on him.
The soldier did not run away, and seemed more inclined to fight than Tanfer. Finally they got inside the house, and I saw the soldier, the complainant and several other men rolling on the floor. Some of the men looked like coolies. I saw a second soldier run in. I heard a cry for help, but I cannot remember the exact words, whether "murder" or "police" or "help." I cannot say whose voice it was. I was too far away from the house. I saw the brother Tanfer after the fight was over. He was excited but was doing nothing when I saw him. He had nothing in his hand. He might have had the soldier, but I did not see it. I did not see a woman beating the soldier with a stick.

I saw her running out of the house, going towards Messrs Douglas Lapraik's. I did not see anything in her hand. She was a Portuguese woman. The soldiers seemed to be under the influence of drink. I did not see a soldier strike Tanfer with a cane. I did not notice if any of the soldiers had a cane. It might be that they had.

By Mr Handley.—The first soldier I saw had his coat off, and I did not see he had a belt in his hand. The engine room was very dark, having only one small light.
There must have been more than two men rolling on the floor. I did not see a soldier covered over by a perambulator. I would not swear that there were more than Tanfer and a soldier who were rolling on the floor.

By the Court.—I was too far away to see whether any one had a bamboo in his hand.
Mr John Grant was called.—I am an assistant at Messrs Douglas Lapraik & Co.
I live at the Prys. On the evening of the 16th inst. about 10 o'clock, I was sitting in the drawing room, with a friend. I made a remark that there was a row below. I went to the verandah and saw two men in white fighting. One of them ran into the engine house followed by the other. Shortly afterwards I heard an outcry, and immediately afterwards the two men came out, following each other, apparently fighting still. I saw a man hand something to one of the two men; it looked very much like a spanner, and it seemed to me that the spanner was used towards his antagonist. I could not say who used the spanner. One man fell, and I did not see anything more.
About five minutes after, having put on my clothes, I went below. A Police Lokong came shortly and took the prisoners into custody.

Riva, Father B. Vignani officiated as interpreter in Italian.

Examination of Amloio Giacomo was then continued.—I went to the brothel to look for the 2nd prisoner because I knew he was sure to be found there. I stopped in the brothel about 10 minutes before we went out again. It was after this that we first met the "Turk." I had heard that Achiny had lost his knife on board. (The rest of this man's evidence, elicited by rest, was similar to what he had given yesterday.)

By a Juror: Can you tell us anything how Achiny came to his death, and what caused it?

Answer: I left Achiny with the deceased in the street.

Coroner: When the Indian constables came to the boarding house and you followed them in, was Achiny in the house then?

Answer:—Yes.

Coroner:—You left him and the deceased in the street, how did you account for his being in the house?

He was understood to say that he did not know.

One of the Jurors observed that he believed there were some observations by the 2nd prisoner that had not been interpreted to the Court.

P. O. Bond said he had interpreted everything the man said by way of answers or statements. He remembered having some conversation with the 2nd prisoner when he was taking him down stairs for a necessary purpose. The man asked him why he was not allowed to speak. He replied that when his turn came, he could state what he liked and as long as he liked. He then told the man that he must speak the truth, and asked him if he knew who was the murderer. The man said he didn't know, unless he was the man who was then standing next to him, meaning Achiny.

The Coroner observed that such conversation was not important; but if it was desirable, the 2nd prisoner could be called up and asked about it.

Holmes, the runner to the boarding house, was recalled.—I am sure that at 11 p.m., when I looked up the house, sure I saw Achiny and Bent in their bunks. I even saw Bent getting into his bunk; I am sure that Achiny was in his bunk by his dress. When I looked the house up, at 11 p.m., the only persons not in the house were the deceased and the two prisoners.

The Coroner thought it important to read over Holmes' evidence, and this was accordingly done.

The former evidence of Holmes was read over to him and he affirmed it. He further deposed:—After the door was locked, nobody could get in, and nobody did get in until I let in the Constables. There is no doubt that Achiny was in his bunk that night when I shut up the house.

Frederick Bent was recalled, but he would not say whether Achiny was in the bunk above him or not, when he tumbled into his bunk, as he was not sober.

Daniel Roberts was recalled.—I was quite sober on the night of the 14th inst. I am quite sure I saw Bent, the 1st and 2nd prisoners, the deceased and Achiny go into the house before I turned in. I am sure only the 1st and 2nd prisoners left the house afterwards together. I am sure Achiny was sleeping in his bunk when they went out. Achiny never went out after he came in with the company. I am sure Bent was in his bunk when the two prisoners went out together. I swear Achiny did not go with them.

Low Awoon, a washerman, was called.—I have my shop in Bridges Street. On the night of the 14th inst., three men came into my shop, one came inside, two stood outside. One of the two outside had a concern. It looked like the one in Court. The men had no drinks in my shop.

The Coroner asked if the jury wished Achiny examined again. He had given evidence before. He was recalled, and was made aware of the position he was now in. He knew he need not answer any question unless he liked. He adhered to his former testimony, and said he returned to the boarding house at about 10 p.m., and did not go out again. He knew nothing of the affair. He deposed that he went to the washerman's with Giacomo, Paerara and the deceased.

The 1st prisoner.—Do you remember when we went to the washerman's that I told you to wait, and that I took the organetta from you?

Answer:—I don't know.

The 1st prisoner observed the man was quite drunk.

Solomon Rama was re-examined.—I swear positively that the 1st and 2nd prisoners were at the washerman's on the 14th at 10.30 o'clock, and that the man Achiny was not there. The 2nd prisoner had the concern.

This exhausted all the evidence, and the Coroner said it was clear that Achiny was in the deceased's company. There was the evidence of his being in the boarding house, and of his being absent at the washerman's.

The 2nd prisoner said he wished to say something more. He repeated the story that he had only gone to one house to have some drink and that he did not go elsewhere. He added:—On the morning of the 16th at 8.30 Achiny called me to get up and told me that there was no tea in the house. He asked me to lend him a pair of my own trousers, because he was afraid to show them to the Police as there were two marks of blood on them. He said he wanted to sell his own trousers, and told me to take them outside to sell them. He showed them to me, but I did not take them. The same trousers are now in the hands of the Police. (Produced by Inspector Lindsay, who had said before that there were red marks on them, but he had them examined by 14 d-ctor who pronounced them to be marks of paint.)

The Coroner asked what examination had been made of the marks and who examined them.

Inspector Lindsay said he took the trousers to Dr. Ayres at the Hospital, and he looked at them and said they were marks of paint.

The Coroner observed this was too important a matter; the examination should have been made by microscope or chemicals. He would subpoena Dr. Ayres to attend.

Sergeant Tommy was then despatched to request Dr. Ayres' attendance.

When the additional evidence of the 2nd prisoner was read over to the 3rd prisoner, Achiny, he said he only asked the 2nd prisoner to sell the trousers for him if he could; he did not say anything about spots on them.

The 2nd prisoner here altered his statement. He said the 3rd prisoner did not ask him to lend him a pair of trousers, but what he said regarding their sale or his fear of the police on account of the spots on them.

The 3rd prisoner further said: I put on the pair of trousers on the 14th, but took them off on the 15th because it was warm. The spots on them were marks of red paint which I got on board. I wished to sell the trousers in order to buy a new pair. I did not want to go to sell them myself because I had never sold any clothes before.

Dr. Ayres, Colonial Surgeon, here arrived and was sworn.—Inspector Lindsay showed me a pair of trousers the other day and I examined two spots on them, with the view of ascertaining whether they were blood-stains or not. The spots were of red paint which had eaten into the material of the trousers, and I took out a piece with a penknife. They bore no resemblance to blood stains. There could be no doubt about it, and I did not think it necessary to make a further examination of them.

The 2nd prisoner's statement on the point was read to the Doctor, who, however, adhered to his evidence. The spots smelt strongly of paint when the trousers were sent to him. He had no doubt about that. The spots had the appearance of having been cleaned by turpentine.

The Coroner then addressed the Jury. He would read over the whole mass of evidence to them if they wished, but he had no doubt the facts were fresh in their memory. He had only a few words to say to them on the issues of the case.

The first point was whether the man came to his death on the 14th instant and how. From the evidence of the doctor, the man must have died almost instantaneously. Therefore there was no question as to the cause of death, but the next question was whether the homicide was murder or manslaughter, and the Jury no doubt knew the difference between them, the one being a killing with malice, the other without malice. The Coroner then gave the salient points in the evidence, following the acts of the different men during the night and fixing the time of the killing at 11.30 p.m. Next referring to the points in the evidence as to the accused, he mentioned those in favour of the accused. First of all there was the absence of motives. There did not appear to have been any cause for the murder. Coming to the adverse points, he referred to the fact of the two men first charged speaking in French and Italian, which coincided with the evidence of Miss Pereira. There was, moreover, the fact that she gave it as her opinion that the voice of the 2nd prisoner was like the voice she heard that night. There was no doubt that the concern in Court was the one seen in Aberdeen Street, and there was the curious fact that the 1st prisoner should have first gone to a brothel to look for the 2nd prisoner instead of going to the boarding house. The 1st prisoner accounted for this by saying that he had been told by the 2nd that he would be found there, but on this point, he was contradicted by the 2nd prisoner. As to the cropped up evidence against Achiny, the Coroner pointed out the improbabilities of it, and expressed his opinion that Achiny was clearly out of the case, whatever might be the Jurors' opinion against the other two. There was one point which might argue both ways, that was the men's running down Gough Street. It would have been a shorter cut to get back to Taipingshan, and this fact would not have been known to the men unless they were old residents in the Colony. On the other hand, old residents would have known that the gate would be shut at a certain time of the night and would not have attempted that road and got into a corner. So therefore the point spoke both for and against the assumption that the murderers were new or old hands. With regard to the two prisoners in custody the fact of the three men speaking Spanish, French and Italian, and these languages having been the languages heard by the Miss Pereira, certainly supported the supposition of the Police that these were the men who committed the deed, and there was the fact of one of the men having by admission placed himself in the actual spot of the occurrence. After a few more observations, the Coroner left the case in the hands of the Jury.

The Jury after due deliberation brought in a verdict to the following effect: That the deceased, Manoel Rae, came to his death from wilful murder caused by a stab in the heart by a two-edged knife or dagger, on the night of the 14th inst., by certain person or persons unknown. They further found that grave suspicion rested on Amloio Giacomo and Paerara Joseph.

The Governor moved the first reading of the following Ordinance:—

An Ordinance enacted by the Governor of Hongkong, with the advice of the Legislative Council thereof, to authorize the Appropriation of a Supplementary Sum not exceeding Seventy-four thousand Dollars to defray the Charges of the Year 1878.

Whereas it has become necessary to make further provision for the public service of the Colony for the year 1878, in addition to the charge upon the revenue for the service of the said year already provided for in the Estimates submitted to the Legislative Council; Be it enacted by the Governor of Hongkong, with the advice of the Legislative Council thereof, as follows:—

I. A sum not exceeding Seventy-four thousand Dollars shall be and the same is hereby charged upon the revenue of this Colony for the service of the year 1878, the said sum so charged being expended as hereinafter specified; that is to say:—

His Excellency said these items had already gone through the Finance Committee. They were for expenditure incurred in the time of his predecessor; nevertheless it was his formal duty to move their first reading. There was a decrease of over $3,000, although some items showed a large increase.

The Chief Justice said that unless the vote was pressing he thought it had better take the usual course and be postponed for a second reading. He had no objection to offer to any of the items, but he thought it was always as well to let bills take their usual course, unless there was special occasion for hurry.

The Ordinance was then read a first time.

THE FIRE BRIGADE.

The Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the Engineering Department of the Fire Brigade submitted the following report:—

"Your Committee are of opinion, after hearing the evidence and opinions of several gentlemen conversant with the state of the Fire Brigade and competent to form a judgment, that it is not expedient at the present time to make any change in the existing arrangements for the supervision of the Engineering Department. The Committee would strongly recommend, however, that boilers similar to those now used in the Dock Yard Engines be substituted without delay for those at present attached to the Government Engines. Your Committee are disposed to think that it might be possible to procure these boilers in Hongkong, and they would recommend the adoption of this course if feasible in preference to sending to England for them in order that the change may be effected with the utmost expedition. This recommendation is based upon a consensus of opinion amongst all those whom the Committee had the honour to examine, that the breakdowns which occasionally take place with the Government engines are attributable mainly if not entirely to the faulty principle upon which their boilers are constructed. The Committee are not aware of any other change which is necessary to make in the Engineering Department of the Fire Brigade.

(Signed) J. GARDINER AUSTIN, C. M. A.

The report was passed.

THE COMPANIES' ORDINANCE.

The Governor moved the second reading of the Ordinance to amend the Companies' Ordinance 1869, and to repeal Ordinance 4 of 1870.

The Chief Justice: In making any observations in regard to this Ordinance, I do so in no other spirit than that of simply my duty. This is one of those ordinary bills which very much illustrate and carry out the principle that this Colony, like the Straits, Ceylon and other colonies, where there is not a representative Government, must be in all important matters essentially governed from Home. When difficulties arise here the ultimate ruling power must of necessity be the Colonial Office, and it is because that this is so that I bow with the greatest deference to what I may look upon as the order or decision of the last court of resort with reference to any legislation in this Colony. I feel it is impossible that this Colony can be governed in any other way, by reason of the reply which has been sent out in answer to the application for representative government in Ceylon. In regard to the subject of the Ordinance I cannot pretend to say that I have altered my opinion, and I formed my opinion after mature consideration, and, having done so, I cannot say I have altered one opinion with respect to the effect and character of the limited liability companies in this Colony, fortified as I am by many of the most eminent judges, not among the least of them I may name an authority which I think will have great weight, namely, Lord Justice Knight Bruce. But feeling this, I see here is an order—the Colonial Secretary has condensed to discuss the views I have taken, and I have but one course to take, and that is to bow to his all conclusive view of this subject. Therefore I have only to say that I have no doubt that the views which are taken authoritatively at Home on this subject must be correct, and therefore I shall far from offering any opposition to this Ordinance, and shall carry provisions of which I may again add, do not meet with my approval.

The Council then went into Committee on the Bill.

The 36th Section reads as follows:—

"Every prospectus of a company and every notice inviting persons to subscribe for shares in any joint stock company, shall specify the dates and the names of the parties to any contract entered into by the company, or the promoters, directors, or trustees thereof, before the issue of such prospectus or notice, whether subject to adoption by the directors of the company, or otherwise, and any prospectus or notice not specifying the same shall be deemed fraudulent on the part of the promoters, directors and officers of the company knowingly issuing the same, and any person taking shares in the company on the faith of such prospectus, unless he shall have had notice of such contract."

The Governor said in reference to this clause, that it had lately been stated by one of the Judges at Home in the course of a case (Twycross v. Grant) that it was so wide in its application it would actually include a case of contract between a promoter and his washerwoman—every contract, it was stated, must be stated in the prospectus. The question was whether, if this clause was framed so wide, as to include contracts which should not be included, whether they should not amend it in introducing it into the Ordinances here. This Bill was so far simply a copy of the Imperial act.

The Chief Justice: You are directed to pass the Bill as it is.

The Governor said he would take the responsibility of altering it, if the amendment were necessary.

The Chief Justice inquired if the remarks of the Judge at Home were made in a derogatory judgment. He understood that in the case of Twycross and Grant the decision was not given yet.

The Attorney General replied that the decision was not yet given.

The Chief Justice: Then it is merely arbitrary dicta.

The Attorney General thought it would be better to pass it as it was, and wait the decision in the case. They were guided in the law here by the decisions at Home.

The Governor said it was a matter of interest. Several discussions had arisen on the subject at Home, in the course of the case in question, and one of the Judges had remarked with reference to another point involved in the discussion of this clause, "I am afraid a great failure of justice will occur" etc. It was just possible that they might hold that as the Act stands every contract should be stated. It was well for unofficial members to understand the full scope of the clause. When they issued a prospectus they would be bound under this clause to state in terms every contract that had been made by the promoters, directors or trustees of the company, with latest names of persons and so on. It now turned out that, according to the interpretation placed on this clause, subcontracts, for instance such a contract as a man must make with a printer for printing the prospectus, must be stated, and other contracts which had not previously been stated in the prospectuses of companies.

The Chief Justice: It would be a fraud in itself if they were not entered in the books.

The Governor: They are to be stated in the prospectus.

Mr Lowcock said that if it were a matter of much importance it would soon attract attention at Home.

The Governor: I have merely mentioned the matter as I thought under the circumstances the Council should have it before them.

The Attorney General said that before they made any alteration he thought it would be well to see the decision in Twycross v. Grant. At present they had joint stock companies on exactly the same footing as the companies in England.

Mr Keswick said he did not think the Ordinance would be soon availed of.

After some corrections of clerical errors the Bill passed through Committee and was read a third time, and passed.

The Council adjourned sine die.

China.

Pootchow.

(Herald, June 14th.)

The Teamen at Hankow are said to have made very handsome profits on first crop cotton—averaging about 12s. 5 per cent; and a large supply of second crop leaf is consequently, and not unreasonably, expected. Pootchow Teamen have also been favored beyond their most sanguine expectations, and a like result seems equally inevitable.

Rice is, we hear, now selling in the city at $4 per picul. This time last year it was worth about $3 per picul. The former price is considered excessively high, though as compared with quotations in many other parts of the country—especially in Shanghai and Chihli—it may be termed moderate. The large supplies recently received will doubtless have some effect in checking any further marked advance in value.

Heavy rains up country have had the usual effect on the river, which has risen to such an extent during the past two days as to seriously interfere with ordinary traffic. The shipment of tea has been prohibited by several local insurance offices, and the supply of fresh fish has been greatly curtailed. These are the only inconveniences experienced so far. As we go to press the river is rising rapidly.

The Taotai of Formosa has, we learn, issued a proclamation informing the people of the district between Takao and Taiwan, that a line of telegraph is to be constructed between those places, and warning the inhabitants to abstain from all interference with the work. Roads from the capital to different parts of the island have been commenced, and an effort is being made to attract Chinese settlers from the mainland.

THE REBELLION IN JAPAN.

(Tokio Times, June 9th.)

No definite or decisive intelligence has arrived from the disturbed provinces of the southwest. The rebels establish themselves, from time to time, in positions supposed to be important, which they immediately abandon at the approach of the Imperial troops. Hitoyoshi was the last stronghold in which they proposed to defy their antagonists to all eternity, but it was soon seriously menaced that they dispersed in great confusion. It seems impossible that they can ever again unite themselves in effective force, even against Kagoshima, but the agitation nevertheless continues, and will not be allayed while so large a district is overrun by roving bands of insurgents. The theory of the government is that it is useless to carry the conflict into the mountains, where excessive ideas of life would be inevitable, and that the certain result can as well be attained without wanton sacrifice of blood and treasure. Various reports of disturbances in other regions have been circulated, but none of these is verified. The Emperor remains in Kioto. The Nobles' School in Tokio has been provisionally opened.

ENGLAND AND THE SUEZ CANAL.

(Saturday Review.)

Englishmen will naturally direct their chief attention to, and will speculate on, what rules ought to be laid down with regard to the Suez Canal. A question on this subject was asked on Thursday night, and Sir Stafford Northcote answered that England could not possibly abandon the time of war, but that it would be a great advantage to have the troops she might want to place in India. No other answer could be given. If, when we are at war, we are not to send troops to India, we should be able ourselves from making the only use of the Suez Canal which is of real importance to us. But then, if our ships are to pass in time of war through the Suez Canal, we could not expect our enemies not to try to prevent them from passing. Let us suppose that we were at war with France, and that France held Egypt as France held it in the time of Napoleon. It cannot be imagined that a French army would line the banks of the Canal, and remain calm and contented while they saw our ships go by under their noses. They would fire on the passing vessels, and it would be impossible to contend that they were transgressing beyond their belligerent rights in doing so. They would also try to lay down torpedoes, or simply sink a ship at the entrance of the Canal. This sinking of a ship at the entrance of the Canal is really by far the greatest danger we have to fear. It is not very likely that the French or any other Continental nation will get possession of Egypt; but if we were at war, a very inferior maritime Power might succeed in barring the Canal for a time by closing the entrance. We might perhaps try to induce all maritime Powers to agree to rule that the Canal should never be closed in this way, but we could hardly hope that they would really observe the rule in time of war. Nor is there any very obvious reason why other maritime Powers should accept such a rule. It would be a rule made exclusively for the benefit of England. As the Suez Canal is a highway of universal trade, the natural rule in the interest of Europe would be that it should be preserved as a highway, whether in peace or war, and that no vessels of war belonging to a belligerent should pass through it. Even without any rule being laid down, it might seem as if any belligerent had a right to call on Turkey to fulfil the duties of a neutral, and to close to the ships of all belligerents the passage through an artificial ditch made exclusively on Turkish territory. But England declines to permit anything of the sort; necessity compels her. She must send her troops through the Canal, without regarding the neutrality of Turkey or the commercial interests of other nations. She is strong enough to do it, and she frankly tells the world that she is going to do it. If she thus uses the right of the stronger—and there can be no doubt that she has no choice and must use it—there seems very slight hope of persuading other nations to agree that, if they are at war with her, they will put no obstacles in her way. She cannot have the bargain all on one side; and that the bargain would be all on one side if she might send troops through the Canal in time of war, and her enemy was pledged not to stop her using this privilege, is sure to be pointed out to her if she tries to negotiate with the object of procuring such an engagement. She must rely, not on negotiations, but on her navy. If she holds the entrance to the Canal in force, she can permit, and of course would permit, the vessels of neutrals to use the Canal although war might be going on. But it is the English navy which would make the arrangement possible, just as it is the English navy which makes it possible to establish the claim that English troops shall be sent to India in time of war through neutral territory.

War has broken out, and our neutrality has been proclaimed, but still there is a disposition to ask—Can nothing more be done? To some such vague feeling, probably, we must assign the origin of the questions put last night by Lord Delawarr in the House of Lords with respect to the neutrality of the Suez Canal. Lord Derby replied to Lord Delawarr's questions by describing the actual state of affairs. No treaty or international act of any kind exists by which the neutrality of the Suez Canal is secured. Indeed the idea of neutralising a good waterway connecting two continents is not one that explains itself. We know what the neutrality of a territory is, as was exemplified by Belgium and Switzerland in the Franco-German war, but those countries had been made neutral by treaty. The passage of the Suez Canal is not forbidden to ships of war by any treaty, as the soil of Belgium and Switzerland is to foreign armies. The Khedive's concession, under which it was constructed, declares it "open for ever as a neutral way to every commercial vessel proceeding from one sea to the other," but is silent regarding ships of war. Lord Derby told Lord Delawarr, as Sir Stafford Northcote did on an earlier day told Mr Munz in the House of Commons, that the Government would object most decidedly to the neutralisation of the Canal in all ordinary senses of that expression. I.e., to any arrangement which in time of war would prevent the ships of war of any nation from passing through the Canal. That would be to deprive ourselves of the use of the Canal, and compel us to rely on our ordinary routes, and any extraordinary relief that might become necessary, through Egypt by the railway, as we did before the Canal was opened. At present we move about 20,000 troops a year backwards and forwards between this country and India and for this purpose find the Canal very useful. Lord Derby therefore repeated what the Chancellor of the Exchequer had said in the other House, that the maintenance of uninterrupted communication through the channel is now an English interest of the highest order, and one which Ministers would feel it their duty not to neglect.

(Standard, May 5.)

The neutralisation of a piece of water usually means the prohibition of vessels of war entering it. That is a rule to which we could not agree. The Suez Canal is the connecting link between the centre of the Empire and its most important outlying portion. It is, therefore, chiefly of use to us as facilitating the defence of our great Eastern dependency—that is, maintaining our naval supremacy in the Mediterranean, Red Sea, and Indian Ocean, and expediting the transport of troops. Obviously we could not give up our right to use the Canal for these purposes. It may be said, then, that the passage ought to be thrown freely open to the ships of war of all countries. That suggestion overlooks the fact that the Canal runs through Turkish territory. It cannot seriously be argued that the Sultan ought to allow a Russian fleet to pass through his territory. There clearly, then, is no device by which we can ward off the dangers with which the Canal is threatened but that adopted by the Government, of declaring that we shall regard an attack upon the Suez Canal as directed against ourselves. Apart from the fact that we are part owners of the Canal, and therefore, commercially interested in it, we have shown that international law lays no obligation upon us to avoid doing so. Above considerations of international law, however, and of mere commercial interests, we have the higher right to protect against aggression the safety of the Empire. Belligerent rights are admitted only because we all recognise that a people engaged in hostilities is entitled to do the maximum of injury to its enemy. How much more sacred is the right of a people at peace to prevent its imperial interests from being seriously damaged. The people which is not prepared to do so at any cost and any hazard has ceased to be a Great Power, and is dependent for existence on the forbearance of others.

In the evening papers of May 8 it was announced that Mrs. Bravo had died suddenly at Cannes, in France. Upon inquiring at Balkan, information was obtained that no confirmation of the report had been received.
